The Moving Picture Boy entry:

"This romantic-looking boy, with a wide, dreamily sensual face, was the leading Spanish-speaking child actor of his period, presumably son of the actor Joaquin Busquets (1875-1942). The Mexican film historian Emilio Garcia Riera registers with profound boredom his "unremittingly tearful face" in one sentimental drama after another. Summarising "EL INTRUSO", "The intruder," writes Garcia, "was Narciso Busquets, snivelling even more than usual, and crippled and illegitimate into the bargain.. a sort of Cinderella on crutches."

The uncritical Mexican public liked Narciso, clearly. His other leads included "UNA LUZ EN MI CAMINO", "LOS DOS PILLETES", "DULCE MADRE MIA" and "LA PEQUEÑA MADRECITA". Busquets continued to act in films of the Forties and Fifties, and was still acting in the late Seventies. He also did much dubbing work."
