The Moving Picture Boy entry:

“Bobby is the little dark boy at the start of “INVASION OF THE BODY SNATCHERS”, terrified of his mother whom he no longer recognises. (He calms down, of course, when he himself is “podded”.) There had been an earlier juvenile Bobby Clark in Hollywood – a ridin’ boy of twelve or so who had been active in 1939: in “TRIGGER SMITH”, in the serial “OVERLAND WITH KIT CARSON”, and in the SAGEBRUSH FAMILY series.

The unrelated Bobby II was born about 20 years later, and was acting by the time he was seven. Gene Kelly chose him as co-star in his French-based vehicle “THE HAPPY ROAD”, and paired him with Brigitte Fossey, five years after “JEUX INTERDITS”. The other French children in the film are led by Jimmy Urbain, Jacques Moullières and Yves-Marie Maurin. Bobby Clark also starred as the hero’s son in the TV series “Casey Jones”.”
