Reality is in the eye of the beholder – “ALL THINGS BRIGHT AND BEAUTIFUL” Source: Sunday Times

Sunday Times review of “ALL THINGS BRIGHT AND BEAUTIFUL”:

“A delightful film, set in rural Ireland in 1954, stars 10-year old screen veteran Ciaran Fitzgerald as a lad who is believed to have seen a vision of the Virgin Mary. The parish priest (very well played by Tom Wilkinson) is convinced that a miracle has occurred, but he does appear to be a few beads short of the full rosary. As a circus of media people, pilgrims and the terminally sick hits the town, the boy’s father (Kevin McNally) steps in to pull his son back down to earth. This is a picturesque and evocative movie given effective edge by its writer and director, Barry Devlin.”
