The Moving Picture Boy entry:

"Slim Mickey had an interesting, edgy, screen personality which earned him a good deal of work - sometimes as a sensitive, sometimes a meanie. In 1941, in a wave of patriotism, he too dumped his Germanic surname and adopted the hugely Anglo-Saxon "Mickey McCune" for screen purposes. By the end of 1944, though, he was back as Kuhn, still with a characteristic expression of scornful distaste.

In 1947 Mickey was in "HIGH CONQUEST", "MAGIC TOWN" and "RUSTY LEADS THE WAY", plus an important role in Howard Hawks's "RED RIVER". Then he was seen, more sporadically, in such films as "THE BROKEN ARROW" ('50), "ON THE LOOSE", "A STREETCAR NAMED DESIRE" and "THAT'S MY BOY" ('51) and "THE LAST FRONTIER" ('55).

Nearly thirty years later Mickey Kuhn made a long-delayed comeback in "THE HOUSE ON SORORITY ROW" ('83), but by now he had moved into a different field, as Flight Administrator at Logan International Airport."
