Born: UK; c1941

In the early Children's Film Foundation title "THE CLUE OF THE MISSING APE", which won a prize at the 1954 Venice Film Festival, he played the lead as an intrepid Sea Scout who rescues an airman and is rewarded with a trip to Gibraltar, where he sets about thwarting a nest of foreign saboteurs bent on destroying the fleet . Nothing else is known of him.

Above: with Nati Banda, who plays Pilar, daughter of his Naval host in Gibraltar, and co-thwarter of insidious foreign plots.

1: Jimmy rescues a naval pilot...

2: And is sent to the Rock as a "reward"...

3: Pilar, his host's daughter escorts him on a tour of Gibraltar in search of plots to foil...

4: While tailing a pair of oily foreign types the two are captured. One of the spies has a nasty moustache.

5: Pilar and Jimmy overhear the saboteurs planning all sorts of wickedness. They decide to escape...

6: So they overpower their startled captors and run for it

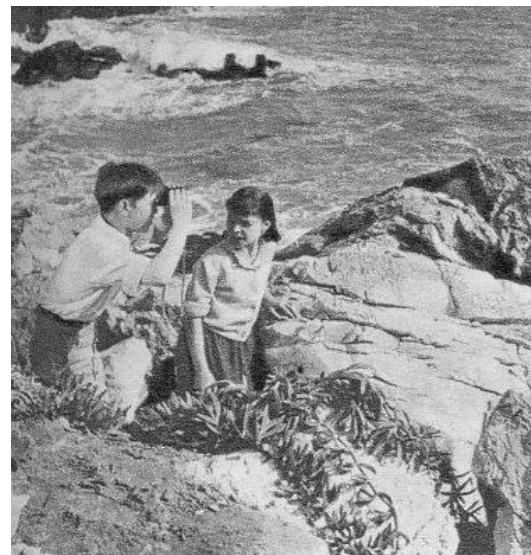

7: Commandeering a boat, they elude the villains, and gloat over the poison they snatched from them...

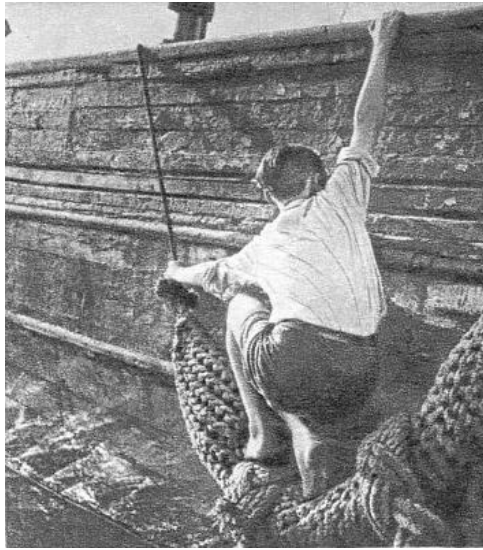

8: But once they are rescued and strip-searched for the "evidence", Jimmy finds he must have lost it at sea...

9: They both get a stern lecture from Pilar's father for telling tall stories to the Royal Navy

10: So there's nothing for it but to solve the case themselves (grown-ups can be so slow-witted)

11: While Pilar creates a diversion, Jimmy steals aboard the villains' boat...

12: Where he learns of their dastardly plan to attach limpet mines to ship's bottoms, which is very rude

13: This time, with the plans to prove it, Jimmy is believed, and the Navy swings into action...

14 : The oily foreign types are caught, and Jimmy and Pilar are promoted to the ranks of M.I.6
