Born: US; 1961

His only significant role was as George C Scott's middle son Davey (14) in the Hemingway story "ISLANDS IN THE STREAM". Davey still resents the way his dad, a sculptor now living in self-exile in the Bahamas, used to manhandle his mother. During a long tussle with a swordfish, however, the boy proves his mettle with the rod and line, and a new respect grows between them. George C Scott played the father, Brad Savage his brother Andrew (10).

No, he hasn't just had a beating – he's just given his dad one, in fury at the way he used to maltreat his mother, an early scene from "ISLANDS IN THE STREAM"

Two further scenes from "ISLANDS IN THE STREAM", with Brad Savage left in both. Top: the boys look on as dad finds the body of a young merchant seaman washed up on the shoreline after his ship is sunk by a U-boat. Bottom: the three brothers are swimming when a hammerhead shark finds its way into the reef. Location footage was shot in Hawaii, standing in for 1940 Bahamas. Julius Harris (right) plays a hand on George C Scott's boat, and the only black person to speak a line in the film.
