Halliwell's Television Companion review:

"Farmer's widow and two sons try to make a go of a (Scottish) Border hill farm, only to be let down by lousy book-keeping. Hence the title. "Gently absorbing, pawky and truthful" I wrote at the time. "If you want to see how film-making can be understated, oblique and yet wonderfully lucid just watch the relationship evolve between the younger of the two boys and the friend of the family, as played by Jonathan Newth in one of the most subtle and consummate performances I've seen." Written by Michael Wilcox; directed and produced by Michael Darlow for Partners In Production and Channel 4's "Film on Four".
