The Moving Picture Boy entry on Ganev:

"This whimsical mouse, a lawyer's son, rapidly became a Bulgarian favourite in his early films. Two of them - "CHILDREN PLAYING" and "EXAMS" - were directed by Ivanka Grubcheva: delightful episodic affairs in which Dimitar's droll expressions and attitudes were prominent. In "HOUSES WITHOUT FENCES" he is an orphan cared for , with varying success, by a succession of friends and neighbours before being entrusted to a children's home. His innocent frankness [sic] at once disconcerts and disarms. He also had a lead in "The Hedgehogs' War", a TV serial of the mid-1970s which was released several years later in condensed cinema form."

The Moving Picture Boy entry on Kochev:

"The son of scientist parents, Aleko was discovered by Ivanka Grubcheva, who gave him a small part in "DECA IGRAYET VEN" and then the lead in "PRI NKOGO", an admirably unsentimental drama of divorce. Its title, "With No-one", is the boy's answer in court when asked which of his parents he wants to go and live with. Having finished his military service, Aleko - who once described himself to Grubcheva as "your lazy boy" - hoped to return to acting."

No further information currently available. "Exams at Any Old Time" - "IZPITI PO NIKOE VREME" (74) was an award-winning children's portmanteau film from the Marmorev brothers, who also produced "WITH CHILDREN AT THE SEASIDE" (real title unknown). It's possible that film and this one are the same, details being so scant and foreign language titles often translated in multiple forms. Dimitar Ganev was 6 and Aleko Kochev 14.
