Halliwell's Film Guide review

"A mild teenager gets a job as a timber guard. Unsensational version of a rustic classic, from the novel by Gene Stratton-Porter. A 1960 remake for Fox starred Martin West."

"The novel, published in 1875, is shown to have sold 2,000,000 copies. It will have a tough time making the same grade as a picture... its appeal is of a past generation."

No further information currently available. The third of four films of the same title from Stratton-Porter's book. Virginia Weidler was 8, the only cast name I can presently trace.

See also the 1928 silent version with Johnny Fox Jr and Leon Holmes (there was a previous one in 1917). No subject index categories seem relevant.
