Leonard Maltin's Movie and Video Guide
 1996 review:

"High school dolt stumbles onto invisibility formula, which enables him to poke into the girls' locker room and such. Crude in all respects. Bomb"

Video Movie Guide 1993 review:

"Geared for pre-teens, this sci-fi comedy about a boy who accidentally discovers an invisibility potion might be a little too juvenile for all audiences. All of the high school-type fantasies are explored to their fullest, and Karen Black as the dippy (and overdone) mother fits more into a teen comedy genre. Rated "PG" for language and nudity. **"

What's On TV note:

"Comedy about a boy who sets out to prove that his late father's invisibility formula really works."

No further information currently available. This belongs then in the same bin with the execrable "PORKY'S" and "MEATBALLS" films, and to a lesser extent heterosexual adolescent wish-dream titles such as "WEIRD SCIENCE", "MY TUTOR", "PRIVATE LESSONS" and "HOMEWORK". See also "UP THE ACADEMY", which was so dire that MAD magazine had its name deleted from the title.
