

It Came From the Sky

US : 1999 : dir. Jack Bender : ? min prod: : scr: : dir.ph.:
Kevin Zegers
 Christopher Lloyd; Yasmine Bleeth; John Ritter; JoBeth Williams

Ref:	Pages	Sources	Stills	Kbytes	Ω □ € Z ♀	Copy on VHS	Last Viewed
5171	½	1	0	-	- - - -	No	Unseen

Amazon.com customer review (replete with all its own typo's and grammatical errors):

"There are some film's whose heart's are in the right places but just don't have enough oomph to rise above the ordinary. This is such a film. What sounds like a B-monster movie is actually a comedy/drama about a group of people who do some self-discovering and resolve some issues over one fateful night.

Ritter, Williams and Zeger, make up an Unhappy family, whose day to day live seems to be keeping their "special" son, Andy, happy and functioning. Mother is a bit too obsessive with taking care of her boy, whilst Dad is just plain unhappy. Then one day, when Andy make believes he crashes his toy plane into his toy house, a real plane crashes into their roof, and out comes an odder than odd couple (Lloyd, Ritter) on their way to Vegas for Valentines Day.

What ends up happening is the Guests end up staying around for a while, and also bring a bit of magic and life back into the household and help with Andy too. The film's got some good messages in it, but it is a bit odd. As for plot holes, there are aplenty. At the start when Andy seems to make his toy plane crash, resulting in the plane crashing for real, we assume he must have some kind of magical power. We never learn anymore about it though. As for Lloyd's shady insurance agent, we never quite work out whether or not he is the shonky con-man Ritter suspects he is. Anyway for what it's worth, this will fill an afternoon in. ¼ "

- Clint Morris, Avondale Heights,
Victoria, Australia

[no listing in "Leonard Maltin's Movie and Video Guide 2001"]

No further information currently available. It's suspicious that there's no listing in Maltin under the given title, even if it were a TV movie, and the cast suggests it was not. We must presumably translate "special son" as meaning mentally handicapped.

See subject index under DISABLED / HANDICAPPED for want of further details..