While his brothers and sisters are off on a picnic, young Bunty must face the music from his patriarchal father for accidentally laming a valuable horse. Father isn't in forgiving mood. Source: The Movie and TV Spanking Page

Child-rearing takes on a whole new meaning for Bunty

The Movie and TV Spanking Page comment:

“An Australian TV series based on a well-loved novel. Here, 10-year old Bunty has admitted to his father that he is the one responsible for laming his father’s prized horse with a cricket ball.”

No further information currently available. As best I can recall this nondescript serial, the story hinged on a governess to the seven children of the title whom father ultimately marries, as Christopher Plummer did Julie Andrews in “THE SOUND OF MUSIC”. The global warming problem experienced here by Bunty, the youngest of the clan, was not a significant incident even in the episode where it appeared, although doubtless it was significant enough to him.
