ARISTOCRACY & ROYALTY

The Boy King Ptolemy.

Anthony Harvey (14) played Pharaoh Ptolemy (a near-invisible role) in "CAESAR AND CLEOPATRA" (45). Richard O'Sullivan was equally marginalised in the Burton/Taylor 1963 version "CLEOPATRA"

Anna Karenina

US 35: Freddie Bartholomew (11) took third billing as Tsarevitch Alexei.

Avonturen van een Zigeunerjongen

Neth (= "Adventures of a Gypsy Boy")

The Bandit of Sherwood Forest

US 46: Maurice Tauzin as boy king Henry III, marked for disposal by the wicked regent, but rescued by Cornel Wilde as the son of Robin Hood. Tauzin is barely on screen until the final prize-giving ceremony. He's so tucked out of the way, indeed, that nobody in the film – his mother included – can remember his name.

The Beastmaster

US 82: Josh Milrad in a posing pouch plays usurped prince Drax (?) restored to his dignity by hero half-brother of the title in a disappointing sword & sorcery epic from director Don Coscarelli.

Bottoms Up!

UK 60: Betting tout's son Melvyn Hayes holes up in a seedy boys' school masquerading as a crown prince. Z Z later arrives as the genuine article.

Caesar and Cleopatra

UK 45: Anthony Harvey (14) not much in evidence as Pharaoh Ptolemy, half-brother of Cleopatra and in her view surplus to requirement.

Cleopatra

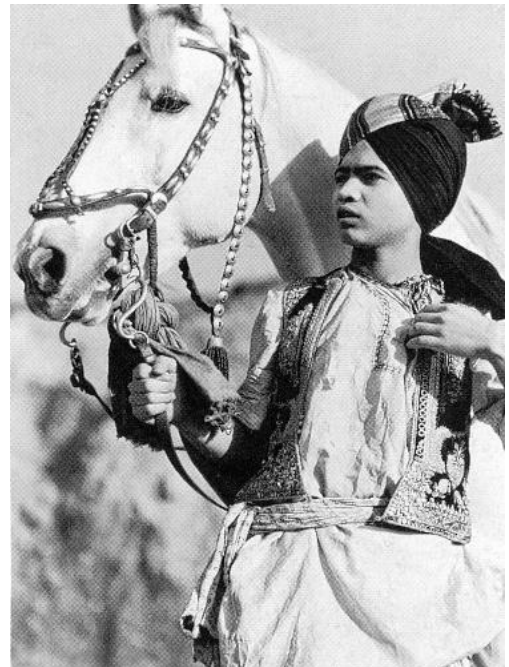

Richard O'Sullivan as Ptolemy sent packing just as swiftly. X X plays Caesarian, son of Cleopatra and Julius, arriving at Rome in a modest ceremony.

Crossed Swords

Lanky, sullen and way too old, Mark Lester half-heartedly assays the famous Mark Twain dual role in a listless remake of THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER.

Dangerous Exile

Richard O'Sullivan as Louis VIII
